PREMIER FERGUSON'S ARMOURIES FIGURES FAIL

Speaking in the Armouries, Premier Ferguson said : "Since the O.T.A. came into force the crimes against women—the most serious crimes of all—have greatly increased." Mr. Nickle speaking in Kingston on Friday gave the following official figures. "They speak louder than Mr. Ferguson : In 1914 there were 61 convictions for rape and assault. In 1924 there were only 21. In 1915 there were 464 found in houses of ill fame ; in 1924, only 110. In 1915 there were 68 cases of seduction ; in 1924, there were 24. In 1915 there were 176 cases of indecent assault ; in 1924, 81. The speaker went on to quote other figures, all of which backed his statement of crime being decreased under the O.T.A., and then asked, "Have I sustained my contention ?" and the audience replied, "Yes."

CANADA'S FOREMOST CONSERVATIVE ON GOVERNMENT CONTROL

Sir Geo. E. Foster speaking at Kingston says : "The Prime Minister's proposal is to take prohibition out of the Act and replace it with the free sale of all kinds of intoxicating liquor from beer to brandy. The Prime Minister goes further. He says, 'I will not only do that, but I will do another thing. I will open up shops that are necessary to provide you with these intoxicating liquors when you wish, and run it as a government business. I will put my servants and employees in as bartenders. I will put my shops in decent places and surround them with all the majesty and might and glory of the Province of Ontario.' Sir George riddled the claim to government control. "How far does the government's control go ?" he demanded. "It controls mute packages in the shop ; it lifts these mute and harmless packages with its arm ; it prefers them to the bunce and there its control of that package ends," thundered Sir George.

W. E. N. SINCLAIR AND MRS. GORDON WRIGHT AT THE ARMOURIES

A large crowd of interested people met in the Armouries on Thursday afternoon to hear the prohibition side of the present issue debated by those who were masters of the subject.

The first speaker of the afternoon was the local Liberal-prohibitionist candidate, Dr. Ming, who was suffering from a bad cold, but stated in a clear and dogmatic way his stand on the O.T.A. He said that he stood firmly behind the O.T.A. and would support it all the way through. He believed in it personally, was a life-long abstainer, and would do all in his power to see it enforced if elected.

Mr. Sinclair, in opening his speech, pointed out that under the constitution we delegate an authority to an elected representative, and therefore, it is essential if the O.T.A. was to be sustained, that a man who pledged himself to support the Act, be elected. Dr. Ming was the only one running in this constituency who had come out in that manner. Continuing, he said this is a peculiar election. It is a fight of prohibitionists, Liberals and Conservatives against Mr. Ferguson, who has defied all the platforms of the party and gone to the country on an ill defined policy of his own creation. The question of permanent interest, is "shall the will of the people prevail," or shall one man have the power to defy that will as Premier Ferguson was now doing. In 1916 the O.T.A. came into force ; it was ratified by the people by plebiscite in 1919 and 1924.

Mr. Sinclair touched on the changing policy of the premier and then went on to deal with the question of bootlegging. He pointed out that there would still be a great field for the activities of the bootlegger among the youths of the country under the age of twenty-one. With respect to enforcement, Mr. Ferguson had made the statement that he heard the bootlegger ran on a time-table, and said Mr. Sinclair, the premier could not stop bootlegging when they were running on schedule, how could he ever stop it with a system of government sale in vogue. In this election, a vote for Dr. Ming is a vote for prohibition.

Speaking of local matters, Mr. Sinclair promised, if elected, to remove abuses which had grown up around the fishing industry in the community.

MRS. WRIGHT SPEAKS.

Mrs. Wright, national leader of the W.C.T.U., then spoke in part. She made it clear at the outset that she had never sat on a political platform before. She was a Liberal by birth, a Conservative by marriage and a prohibitionist by conviction.

She hoped that no one who wore the white ribbon would vote against the O.T.A. The liquor traffic cannot be licensed without sin, and it is a sin to seek to impose government sale on a prohibition province. The spirit of God once more moved upon the face of the waters and she said as she went through the province she felt that the spirit was brooding over the people today. She was not a "salaried trumpeter," but was giving her time gratis to the great cause. She said she was saying not one word for Dr. Ming nor one word against Mr. Rankin. She was here to plead for the O.T.A. She got up with the women to vote for the O.T.A. It is the greatest temperance legislation the province ever enjoyed and she was to have her choice she would rather vote for the old bar than for the government sale proposals. If in place of government sale the traffic in lives is clothed with a semblance of decency.

Mrs. Wright concluded her address with a telling reference to William Cullen Bryant's story of the early settlers in Berkshires. When they settled in the valleys their live were in danger from the numerous snakes. They learned that there was a snake line twelve hundred feet above sea level, above which the snakes could not live. The people moved up and life was secure.

Ontario, by the O.T.A. had moved above the snake line, and to go back into a system of government sale would be to go down into the valleys among the snakes and the vipers of the liquor trade. Against that she hoped and prayed that every man and woman would set their faces when they record their vote.

The meeting was closed with the National Anthem.

PROHIBITION RALLY IN NAPANEE ARMOURIES

PROMINENT CONSERVATIVES OPPOSE FERGUSON POLICY

MR. BEN SPENCE ROUSES THE AUDIENCE TO ENTHUSIASM AS HE EFFECTIVELY REPLIES TO PREMIER FERGUSON.

Nearly 2000 people gathered in the Napanee Armouries on Wednesday evening to hear the "dry side" of the present election contest.

The chair was occupied by Mr. C. A. Wiseman, a prominent member of the Conservative party in Napanee.

The first address was given by Mr. J. H. Porte, of Picton, a life-long Conservative. Mr. Parte, in a very impressive way stated why he was opposing the Ferguson policy, and made it very clear that Mr. Ferguson had departed from the principles of the party adopted in representative convention and was now seeking to facilitate the sale of liquor in the Province of Ontario.

Mayor Newman heartily agreed with the previous speaker and went on to speak from his experience as the Mayor of Picton and the Superintendent of a large Sunday School, and said that although a life-long Conservative, and a personal friend of Mr. Ferguson's, he was doing all that he could to help defeat Government Control, which he said would not only be detrimental, but disastrous to the Province.

Mr. Ben Spence, of Toronto, was the last speaker and with wit and humor with convincing facts and undeniable facts, literally tore to shreds the Government Control policy of Premier Ferguson.

The enthusiasm and applause of the great audience was clear evidence of where the Prohibition people stood on the present issue.

SIR GEORGE FOSTER TO PREMIER FERGUSON AT KINGSTON.

Sir George was eloquent and emphatic, and, amid a tremendous demonstration from the audience said : "I tell Mr. Ferguson that if you sleep with the brewer and the distiller from this time out, you have taken the first step to your destruction."

Premier Ferguson still insists that Government control is necessary for the reclamation of the youth of the Province. This is the first time that moral health of girls and boys was made a plea for the sale of intoxicating liquor.

A CONUNDRUM.

Has anybody yet figured out how Mr. Ferguson's liquor-selling policy is going to reduce liquor-drinking, and at the same time, bring in millions to the partnership of the Government and the Trade ?

—o—

WHAT GOVERNMENT CONTROL MEANS.

That vastly more liquor will be sold—three or four or perhaps ten times as much.

That there will be more drunkenness.

That the small bootlegger will find an easy source of supply.

That crime, poverty and domestic unhappiness, and all the accompaniments of the legalized liquor traffic will return.

That the brewers and distillers will make more millions.

That the clock of temperance reform will be turned back for twenty years.

That the ground lost will take years of effort.

DR. EDWARD MING

Mayor of Napanee and Candidate for Frontenac-Lennox

Final Appeal to the Electors of Frontenac-Lennox

Ladies and Gentlemen :—

As the momentous day of polling approaches, reports from all sections of Frontenac-Lennox indicate a great victory for the dry forces.

I am the only candidate before you carrying the endorsement of these forces, I appeal to you for your votes on December 1st.

Bear in mind that the Ontario Temperance Act was put into effect by the Conservative Government, under the leadership of Sir William Hearst, with the unanimous support of the Liberal opposition of that day. It is still the policy of both parties and has never been altered nor abrogated by a Conservative caucus or convention. It has twice been endorsed by a referendum of the people. It is still the law of Ontario by the will of the people, and the will of the people must prevail. This is the main prop of constitutional government.

I am running as a Liberal-Prohibitionist candidate, behind a dry leader, who is pledged to support the O.T.A. Personally, I am pledged, if elected, to do all I can to keep it on the statute books and perfect any weakness it may possess.

The electors of Frontenac-Lennox have always recorded a dry vote. The Premier says this is a plebiscite—an attempt to find an expression of public opinion on a great question. There are only two sides to it. I represent the dry side and a vote for me is a vote for the O.T.A., and law observance.

Yours faithfully,

EDWARD MING.

Liberal and Prohibitionist Candidate.

BALLOT IS SECRET

Electors are reminded that their voting privilege is absolutely secret. All officials and agents in the polling places are sworn to secrecy. Any such official or agent who violates his oath of secrecy, or who interferes or attempts to interfere with a voter, or who communicates any information obtained in the polling place as to the candidate for whom a voter is about to vote, or has voted, is liable, on conviction, for any term not exceeding six months, under section 191 of the Election Act.

It is a false pretence to represent to a voter, directly or indirectly, that the ballot is not secret. Sec. 168, sub-section (2) of the Election Act.

Information written in the poll room, by the Polling Clerk, when you are handed your ballot is for the purpose only of keeping tab on the number of electors who have voted and cannot possibly reveal for whom the elector has voted, nor identify your ballot.

How you have marked your ballot is entirely your own secret.

BASE SLANDER REPUDIATED

RETURNED MEN VIGILANT

A rumor that has had wide influence in the country was run to earth on Wednesday by the local branch of the returned men.

The story was that a prohibition speaker had made statements at a public meeting which cast grave reflection on the character of some of the men who gave their lives in the great war. The following statement, which completely exonerates the prohibition union and the Liberal organization, was handed the secretary of the local union by the undersigned. "A short time ago a meeting was held in Odessa by a certain Mr. Grant, an inspector of policies in the Royal Templars of Temperance, who, entirely on his own initiative and irresponsibility, rented a hall and gave an address. In the course of the address Mr. Grant made some slanderous statements concerning the boys who had fallen in the great war. The returned men have investigated the case and find that Mr. Grant made the statements entirely on his own responsibility. The company by whom he is employed have been communicated with and are discharging him and forwarding to the returned men of Napanee a repudiation of the statements.

Signed,

H. BABCOCK.
GRANT PAUL.

THE ONLY QUESTION, WET OR DRY ?

Premier Ferguson has insisted, during the campaign, that the coming election is a plebiscite. We take him at his word. In the last plebiscite, 1924, the electors had to mark their X opposite certain questions to express their will. In this one, the electors mark their X opposite the name of the wet or dry candidate. Dr. Edward Ming is the dry candidate, who stands to maintain, strengthen and enforce the Ontario Temperance Act. Mr. Rankin stands for the sale of liquor under Government auspices. This is what the electors rejected in the 1924 Plebiscite. So the dry electors can only do one thing, i. e., make their ballot for Dr. Ming.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

BY G. C. TRUMBULL,
(Editor of The Sunday School Times.)

RUTH AND NAOMI.

Sunday, Dec. 5.—Book of Ruth. Golden Text—Thy people shall be my people and thy God my God. (Ruth 1 : 16).

In four short chapters we have in the Book of Ruth an exquisitely beautiful pastoral romance, which at the same time is literal history of the most momentous sort, and recorded by supernatural inspiration. It is a record of judgment, affliction, heart-breaking sorrow through repeated deaths, lives apparently so desolated that their story is ended; and Divine intervention, life begun all over again, and a climax unspeakably rich and blessed and of eternal significance.

It was in the time of the Judges of which we studied last week. It was a wild, uncertain time, for "in those days there was no king in Israel: every man did that which was right in his own eyes" (Judg. 17 : 25). There were repeated onslaughts upon Israel from many enemies who were often victorious. As though that were not enough, "there was a famine in the land." A famine is God's direct judgment, as we may be sure that Israel never suffered from famine while she was doing God's will. Yet judgment does always mean blessing, when accepted in humiliation, confession and faith.

The famine drove a man of Bethlehem, with his wife and two sons, out of the land into the country of Moab, across the Jordan, seeking food. The man died, leaving his widow, Naomi, and her two sons, and the latter married women of Moab; Orpah and Ruth. Then the sons died and the three women were left, all widows.

When Naomi learned that her own people had food again, she started back, to the homeland after urging her daughters-in-law to stay in their land and marry again from their own people. One took her at her word; the other, Ruth, "clave unto her." Her words of love and assurance to Naomi have been called a song of lyric beauty:

Intreat me not to leave thee, Or to return from following after thee:
For whither thou goest, I will go; And where thou lodgest, I will lodge:
Thy people shall be my people, And thy God my God.

How rich a real faith had Ruth in God at this time? Was God or Naomi first in her mind and heart? The questions is an interesting one for class discussion. We may not be able to answer it with finality. But even though Ruth's action was prompted by her human love, nevertheless she had some faith in the God always honors that. He will not break the bruised reed, nor quench the smoking flax (Matt. 12 : 20).

So the mother and daughter made their journey together out of the country of Moab, "and they came to Bethlehem in the beginning of barley harvest." Naomi had a kinsman by her husband, "a mighty man of wealth," named Boaz, and Ruth gleaned ears of corn in one of his fields, a common practice in that day when the poor were given this privilege. The story goes on, telling how Boaz noticed the young woman, and was kind to her, until finally she made known to him her relationship to Naomi and therefore to him. There was a kinsman still nearer to the family whose privilege it was, if he should so elect, to marry the young widow; if he should not, Boaz declared his purpose to do so at the same time redeeming or buying a piece of property belonging to Naomi. After going through the usual Oriental formalities, Boaz bought the family property and took Ruth to be his wife. And from this marriage was born Obed, who became the father of Jesse, the father of David.

In other words, the bereaved young Moabitess, Ruth, was brought into the most honored family line this world has ever known or ever will know: the family of which the Son of God became Son of Man. If we turn over the first chapter of the Gospel of Matthew we find, in the genealogy of "Jesus Christ, the son of David, the son of Abraham," the name of Ruth. She may never have known in her early lifetime the full significance of the honor that had come to her; but she knows it now.

The Companion Bible (Oxford University Press) calls attention to the striking fact that there are two books only in the Scriptures bearing the names of women: Ruth, a Gentile, marries a Hebrew husband; Esther, a Jewess, marries a Gentile husband. Two tokens that Gentiles, as such, were to be blessed only through Abraham's seed, according to Genesis 12 : 3 : 18 : 18," etc.

Another calls attention to the fact that, typically, the book may be taken as a foreview of the Church (Ruth), as the Gentile bride of Christ, a Bethlehemite who is able to redeem. Ruth also gives a normal Christian experience: I. Ruth deciding, 1 : II., Ruth Serving, 2 : III., Ruth resting, 3 ; IV. Ruth rewarded, 4."

Canada's Rayon Industry.

Canada is moving forward in the rayon industry, or the making of artificial silk, and her future is bright with promise, bearing in mind her vast resources of timber that form the raw material of the fabric. A report issued by the Natural Resources Intelligence Service of the Department of the Interior shows much progress in recent years. As, per example, Courtlands Limited, the largest manufacturers of the product in the United Kingdom, have a $2,500,000 plant in Cornwall. The Celanese Limited, a $7,000,000 concern, is constructing a large plant at Drummondville, Que. The Howard Smith Paper Mills have formed a subsidiary company called the Canadian Cellulose Co. to be operated in Cornwall, Ont., and the B. C. Pulp & Paper Company is carrying on chemical research into the use of hemlock, with good results to date. Other concerns are reported to be making preliminary moves towards establishing plants.

"DRY" HUMOUR

INSIDE INFORMATION.

Premier Ferguson at Kemptville Nomination—"I know a "widow" and three children whose "husband" is in jail."

Jos. L. Haycock says, "If Premier Ferguson is returned all we will have to do is to sit down and drink ourselves out of debt."

Ben Spence says that the word "parlor" instead of "bar" in connection with beer, is like speaking of a pig pen as a "porker's garage," or "an agricultural parking place for pigs."

While Mrs. Gordon Wright was saying something about Premier Ferguson's policy, the other afternoon, Mr. Sinclair interjected some remark, to which she turned around and said: "What is that, has Mr. Ferguson changed again?"

Joe Haycock says that Ferguson's idea of a moral liquor stores out of his love for the youth of the province, reminded him of the mother who sent her boy out to be a butcher because of his fondness for cattle.

A young married couple on their honeymoon, staying at a hotel, were very shy about having it known they were newly-weds. The young husband tipped the colored porter, to tell the hotel guests that they weren't newly-weds. The next morning they were embarassed by the glances of the other folk in the hotel, and the husband asked the porter what he had told them. He replied, "Why boss, I told them that you two were "Bootleggers," and were just friends." This story, Mr. Joseph Wearing says, illustrates Howard Ferguson's connection with the brewers and distillers.

A young woman speaker from Hamilton, representing a newly formed branch of the Women's Liberal Organization, said: "We are a baby and reputation, but we do not need the bottle."

THE MORAL ISSUE

The Prime Minister of Ontario in the last few days has taken occasion to object to the attitude of certain clergymen who have been actually engaged in the present campaign. To deny the right of the clergy, who are the acknowledged moral leaders of the Province, to take part in this campaign is based on either a misconception of the duties of the clergy, or else a difference of opinion as to the issue.

With respect to the first, as we understand it, the duties of a minister have changed with the changed place of the church in the life of the nation. There was a time when religion was not considered in any way connected even with morality. He then with one whose duties consisted in performing certain rites and sacrifices. But that was long ago. From the inception Christianity has been closely allied with morality, and the priests and ministers of the church have led in all movements for social and moral reform.

It may be argued in the second place that this is not a moral issue. But Premier Ferguson himself said, speaking in the armouries in Napanee, that this is a great moral issue.

Since the Premier has stated that it is a moral issue, and since his government is responsible for bringing this moral issue before the people he must not be surprised if he finds the moral leaders of the country taking an actual part in it.

NAPANEE UNDER THE O. T. A.

"Napanee has so long enjoyed the advantages of a prohibitory law that the residents are apt to forget the conditions that existed a few years ago. One finds it hard to use restrained language in describing the debasing and debauching condition of pre-prohibition days, so very few families but have been injured and blighted in some way by the influence of liquor. Liquor is no respecter of persons, rich and poor alike are affected—the rich are made poor—poor either in money or in character, while the poor are robbed of what little they have. For years and years there were families who were habitually on the town during the winter. Several of these families, known to us all, now have their own home, and have their children well fed and clothed. Many and many a time on a Sunday afternoon responsible men had to make a tour of the hotels in order to get men in a fit condition for work on Monday. The Salvation Army, the churches all had much more relief than since the O.T.A. went into effect; small store keepers have their bills better paid, and the general welfare and appearance of the town is vastly improved. Does any one think that liquor will be robbed of its blighting influence simply because it is sold in government stores.

A Lonsdale Romance.

There is a romantic story, remembered perhaps by very few, connected with the wonderful dinner set of Serves china at Government House. It had been stolen in Paris during the Revolution, and subsequently purchased by the second Earl of Lonsdale, grandfather of the present earl.

There were three pieces wanting, and for these the earl searched for many years without success. At last—his age was 80—he heard that they were catalogued in a sale in London. He sent a friend to purchase them, and, being very feeble, waited outside in his brougham. The missing pieces were purchased, Lord Lonsdale took them home—and died that night.

Youth Incensed at Slanderous Statement of Premier Ferguson

SPEAKING AT ORONO, PREMIER FERGUSON MADE THE FOLLOWING STATEMENT, WHICH HE LATER SAID WAS NOT MADE IN "ANY SPIRIT OF LEVITY"

"Twenty-five years ago a girl would hardly speak to a young fellow who tried to carry a flask, but now they will hardly speak to him unless he does."

A wave of resentment swept across the province among the young people, which culminated in a monster demonstration in Massey Hall, Toronto, which was unable to hold the great crowds that assembled, and overflow meetings were made necessary in Metropolitan and Cooke's churches. It was a unique occasion, for the gathering was organized, financed and "put over" by the young people themselves.

At the close of the meeting resolutions were passed by standing vote, repudiating the statement of the Premier., declaring themselves behind the Ontario Temperance Act, and challenging the young people throughout the province to rise and demonstrate their adherence to the principles embodied in the Act.

Mr. Krug, chairman of the young people's committee, in the address which preceded adoption of the resolution by a standing vote, said that facts must be faced.

"Let us face that situation," Mr. Krug urged. "What are we going to do about it? Are we willing to give to this curse that social and legal recognition which is involved under the present government control proposals? I think not.

"We have been asked to fight fair. We are fighting fair," he declared with emphasis, and the enthusiastic audience thundered its applause. "It is unfair to deny that which is not true? It is not fair to deny grossly exaggerated and defamatory statements about our characters? Too long have people living in the golden age of twenty-five years ago been telling young people what they are and what they want and what to do. We are fighting fair—fighting for our manhood and womanhood, which is the great fight in this election.

"And, believe me, I contend that the increased sale, the increased incentive to drink, imperils the character of our youth in a way that it has not been threatened in years. After all, our strong contention against liquor is the contention of character.

"The majority of the young people in this hall to-night, since the advent of the O.T.A. know practically nothing of the great curse that drink can be in the home life of any home. In this hall to-night are no drinking young people. How many of your friends do you know who are habitually drinking? How many of your friends will take a drink at all? That is particularly the viewpoint from which we must approach this question. And one more I think of the O.T.A. more I marvel at what has been done in so short a time and the more I thank God for those men of vision who insisted in placing their ideals into the great life of this province."

MISS CARKNER

Miss Evelyn Carkner, of Walmer Road Baptist Church, proved a very effective speaker:

She asked:

"What is Government Control? It is freer sale; it is urging the increase of the use of liquor to create revenue. Considered in the light of human values the cost is too great."

"We believe that lawlessness in youth, about which so much is being said, will be increased by the freer sale of liquor. It is generally agreed that the most lawless part of youth is between the ages of 18 and 21. All the arguments about the permit system reducing lawlessness have been done before that. Don't you think that when the older ones are going to have whiskey, and if they want, that the younger ones are going to want it and going to have it? Bootleggers are going to be a happy hunting ground for those who want to buy illegally. Increased drinking brings with it increased lawlessness of a more serious sorts We believe that bootlegging will be far worse than the proposed legislation than it is now, for the simple reason that one of the two difficulties of the bootlegger is eliminated. Where he had both to buy and sell illegally, now all he has to worry about is selling."

DAUGHTER OF EX-MAYOR HILTZ SPEAKS

Pointing to the debt of gratitude owing to those who had fostered temperance measures by increasing effectiveness in the past, Miss Beth Hiltz, daughter of the Ex-mayor of Toronto, said in part:

"The use of intoxicating liquor has not been a temptation to us that it once was to young people in our country. Our parents have protected us, and now that we are old enough to realize the value of that protection it is only fair that we should protect those coming after us. Would it not be an incentive as well as an opportunity to use it if liquor should be made more accessible, if its sale should be given legal and social sanction?

"We are not satisfied with the present social conditions. We are thinking and moving. But it is toward something better we are moving, not worse. Our ambition is not for more excitement; it is for building up of character, better homes and better manhood—for the building of nationhood and world brotherhood."

BOY MAYOR EXTOLS O.T.A.

W. Kenneth Stubbings, boy Mayor of Toronto, went right to the heart of the actual situation that would face lads under the Ferguson plan.

"The Government's remedy as he saw it was: We realize it is against the law for young people to partake of intoxicating liquor, but we will make a division. Your older brother here is 21 years—he is allowed to have liquor. You are 20 years 11 months 29 days—you cannot have it. Again, we will increase facilities. We will put temptation in their way. We will have a liquor store around the corner. That will help the young people." That Mr. Stubbings opined, was the attitude of some men toward the young people today.

"If the boys of this province are of opinion it is smart to break the law, what was the remedy? Surely not to repeal the law because they did not like it. That would be direct encouragement to the so-called revolt. What does Attorney-General Nickle suggest? He declares for advance, not for retreat. He says if the young people are revolting against the law, why repeal this law? If the government say they cannot enforce the law, what right have we to believe they can enforce one just as complicated? The young people are not restless because of the O.T.A. They are restless because they are striving for something greater in life."

KNOX STUDENT AGAINST GOVERNMENT SALE

Allan H. Ferry, of Knox College said:

"What of these hip-pocket flasks and this preference for the "boozing" gentlemen, which we have had thrust into prominence during our present political campaign? In the first place I unhesitatingly state that it is utterly false to convey the idea that these things are prevalent amongst the majority of our young people. Indeed, I go further and would state that they are not even to be seen, unless one looks deliberately for them and searches long after them. We do not possess all the virtues of our forefathers. With regard to alcoholic drinking I have no hesitation in stating that our young people are NOT by any means as addicted to that vice, as were the young people a generation ago. The few who do take alcohol tell you they do, and they take it openly. Therein they differ from the Victorian youth who took it "on the sly" and swore he did nothing of the kind.

"Previously our young ladies retired to the bedroom, ostensibly to brush their curls, in reality to have their glass of port or sherry privately, thereafter to return to discuss the weakness of the men for their whiskey. To-day the modern girl has no use for either wine or whiskey, and in those exceptional cases where she does use either of these, she drinks openly and as a result she is seen by her "fellows" and usually given the cold shoulder. As to the recent allegation that she prefers the company of men who drink, the idea is so absolutely abnormal to the very constitutive construction of the female sex, as to be positively nauseating to all but those of a very low mentality.

Young women today know too much about their physical well-being, and its bearing on their future happiness, to allow themselves to be allured into the company of tipsters and drunkards generates. And I venture to suggest that in the majority of cases where young girls have been found in the company of dissolute young men, it has been the direct result of ignorance in sex matters, for which ignorance their seniors have been directly and criminally responsible.

As to the legendary pocket flask, I believe it exists, comparatively speaking, in about the same proportion as available diamonds are to the world's population.

YOUTH OF KINGSTON STRONG FOR O. T. A.

GREAT RALLY REBUKES PREMIER FERGUSON FOR HIS CHARGES

Kingston, Nov. 25.—There was a great assemblage of the young people of Kingston and district in the city Memorial Hall this evening to protest against the campaign reflections of Premier Ferguson and other Government-control speakers made upon the youth of Ontario. Rev. R. C. Johnston, pastor of the First Baptist Church, and a recent graduate of McMaster University, Toronto, presided.

The speakers and their subjects were: Miss Beth Hiltz, B.A., Toronto, "The Great Moral Issue"; J. Alexander Edmison, Queen's University, "Observations on the O.T.A."; Charles Krug, Toronto University, President of the Young People's Temperance Committee of Toronto, "Youth Refuses to Retreat"; John McCallum, President of the Young People's Association of Queen Street United Church, Kingston, "The Fallacy of Government Control."

Mr. McCallum moved a resolution which was a rebuke to Premier Ferguson for his statements reflecting upon the youth of Ontario and an emphatic endorsement of the O.T.A.

The resolution carried amid great enthusiasm. The meeting was suggested by the great meeting of young people held in Toronto last week.

Long Distance Connections

OF course, you have remarked the quick connection you are now getting on Long Distance calls. In the great majority of cases you get a Long Distance answer about as quickly as you would on a Local call.

This almost revolutionary speeding-up of Long Distance service has come about so quietly that you may have overlooked its vital significance. It has taken many months of preparation and organized effort to bring it about. In a few localities the changes necessary to effect this high-speed service have not been completed.

Your co-operation in giving the Operator the distant number will help, but whether you know the distant number or not, the Long Distance Operator will do her utmost to get the party you want while you hold the line.

WHAT FERGUSON'S GOVERNMENT CONTROL WILL BE LIKE

Premier Ferguson has stated that the system of government Control he is planning to adopt is based upon the Alberta system. This he said at his nomination meeting, according to Mrs. Gordon Wright. Unless he changes his mond before Dec. 1st, it will be interesting to note just how the Alberta Government Control plan works.

A. L. Marks, solicitor, on behalf of an Investigating Committee writes, from Edmonton, Nov. 16th, 1926 :

"Edmonton people much amused at several recent press reports regarding the success Alberta's Government Control system has achieved. After your letter came a carefully selected and reliable committee of citizens was chosen to investigate conditions in this city and to report to you. On Nov. 12th and 13th our investigations revealed the following conditions. Out of Edmonton's eighteen beer halls at closing time Friday evening, there emerged 851 men and 87 women in varying states of intoxication from meek to maudlin. On Saturday evening there came forth 1731 men and 136 women from the same places. In neither case were all the exits therefrom under observation.

A SURVEY IN JANUARY.

"In January this year a survey covering three consecutive nights found 723 men and 89 women of an average in the 19 beer halls then operating. Friday evening there were counted on the streets at closing time 32 and on Saturday evening 59 noisy, obviously maudlin drunks, also on Friday night 11 and on Saturday night 9 taxicabs respectively, obviously being used for immoral appointments, also several flagrant cases of procuring. For example one girl was observed towing two drunken men into a beer hall, followed by three other drunken men. The girl and two men were not observed to emerge afterwards. Her conversation betrayed her calling. Friday evening at 9 beer halls no constable was to be seen just previous to, at, or after closing time and also in many cases on Saturday evenings as well. How can convictions be registered without arrests being made. How can arrests be made by absentee constables ? In any case why should we expect a Government to arrest its own victims ? We submit that the true test of any liquor legislation's effectiveness through results is determined by the number of convictions registered for drunkenness, but by the size of the resulting heap of human wreckage, the interdict list.

INTERDICTION.

"The definition of interdict in the Government Control Act was copied verbatim from the Old Territories Liquor License Ordinance in 1897. During the 18 years, 1897 to 1915, the old bar system produced an interdicts list numbering 899 in 1915 or 44.9 per year. Under the present Act we have created 578 interdicts as at October 16, 1926, or at the rate of 247 5/7 per year. Of the list of 578 only 179 had permits, the remaining 399 were made drunkards either by beer, bootleg, hard liquor or through doctors' perscriptions. Canned heat jags, lemon extract sprees and moonshining as well as systematic bootlegging form part of our cup of misery and the treating system is admittedly worse than it ever has been before in Alberta's history."

H. W. Avison, of Calgary, gives official information as follows :

Calgary, Nov. 11, 1926.

Consider the first authentic compilation of all infractions of the Provincial Liquor laws, which is now before us. For certain reasons, we could not get this until recently and what do we find ?

For the last 8½ months of 1924, total convictions for infractions of the Liquor Control Act were 1743 (1254 for drunkenness and 479 for illegal sale, illegal possession, etc.) 859,771. paid in fines—283 men and 7 women were given jail sentences totalling 352 months. November 1925 reports show the increase over 1924 as follows : 2307 convictions under the Liquor Law (1512 drunkenness, 795 for other infractions of the Liquor Control Act) $79,995 fines and 532 months in jail. And then remember these items do not include :

1. Drunk or Disorderly, or
2. Drunk in charge of auto, which comes under the Federal Act, which numbered :

(1) 148.
(2) 56 respectively.

So we have as grand total convictions for 1925 (from Liquor Control Board's Report)—

Drunkenness (Provincial Act)	1512
Drunkenness (Federal & Town)	148
Drunk in charge of autos...	56
Infractions of Liquor Act (illegal sale, etc.)	795
Total	2511

The Liquor Control Act of Alberta is just what the liquor people want. It is the best system at the present time in their eyes. Today the beer halls, (bars in reality) sell beer for hotelkeepers and breweries. The hard liquor can be secured at licensed Government stores by those over 21, who have paid license fee. There is no police supervision here and policemen tell me that they can buy enough to take to rooms and have carousals of the very worst nature. Policemen with whom I have talked in Edmonton and here say it is their conviction there is more drinking and drunkenness —more impurity—more drunkenness among women. We have now 29 Government Vendor Stores, 350 hotel licenses, 50 clubs (2 recently suspended). Where is Control ? It is simply sale. Control is a misnomer.

Adjutant Stewart of the Salvation Army in Edmonton, under date of Nov. 6, 1926, writes :

Salvation Army spends three times as much for relief in Edmonton under Government Sale. Free meals in 1914—8,837 and in 1925—20,694. Free beds, 1924 —5,239 and in 1925—9,655. Total relief 1924—$4,913.00 and in 1925 $13,944.79.

C. W. Brown, minister of McDougall Church, Edmonton, says on Nov. 7th, 1926 :

"My home is in proximity to the Government Liquor Store and several beer parlours. The entire liquor business is flourishing. The brewers are happy—the licensees prosperous—moderationists jubilant. In my judgment conditions are deplorable and becoming worse. Interdict list growing—a new generation of topers being reared. The number of arrests made is no index to the number intoxicated. Many are staggering in the streets and lanes in the evening and evil women frequent the beer parlors. Let Ontario beware.

USING WASTE MATERIAL.

Feeble-Minded Youths Can Be Used as Community Workers.

The extent to which feeble-minded youths with strong physique can be used as community workers has now been demonstrated by the Rome State Custodial Asylum, the largest New York institution for the feeble-minded. A group of lads under capable direction were moved into camp in the Adirondacks, and in less than a month they had planted out nine thousand five hundred trees; moving on, they planted 15,000 of Norway Spruce on a useless patch of 150 acres. The benefit to the lads themselves, the economy of maintenance, and the direct gain to the State, was so clearly shown that it has now been decided to take over for reforestration 100,000 acres of burned and denuded State land, and it is confidently expected that within ten years wards of the States institution will complete the work assigned them.

Possibly a lesson can be learned from this experiment by our own Government which is now maintaining a population of about eight thousand helpless and worthless people in the various provincial institutions. Not only might reforestration be taken up but camps might be established to clear small farm holdings for the thousands of settlers who within the next few years will be coming from Great Britain to cultivate the virgin soil of New Ontario.

There are other directions also in which the inmates of public institutions might be usefully and profitably employed.

Quebec Industrial Alcohol Company.

Construction has been commenced at Sorel, Quebec, at the plant of the Quebec Industrial Alcohol Company. Molasses, which will constitute the chief raw material, will be stored in five steel tanks, having a total capacity of 3,600,000 gallons. The continuous still, which is being installed, will be capable of producing 9,000 proof gallons a day.

REV. S. F. DIXON ANSWERS GOODWILL

From the Intelligencer, Ferguson supporter, and Ontario, Liberal paper, Mr. Goodwill is reported as declaring : "I am a prohibitionist, "prohibition has been a total failure." "as long as you are convinced that you can take a glass of whiskey—well take it." This is a fine way to teach respect for law, and yet he poses as a champion of law and order.

"G. T. A. means bootlegger, home brewer, and rum runner." Mr. "blind pig" was here before bootlegger ; home brew is not under jurisdiction of the Province, and Hon. Dr. Carr, of Ferguson cabinet, says it is beneficial ; rum running is just as possible with government sale, as every intelligent man knows and Mr. Goodwill should not talk to the gallery.

"People don't want to be reformed, but transformed," says the Reverend gentleman. The Gospel alone can transform. Will he explain how the general sale of whiskey, gin and beer will "transform ?" I agree we should help those addicted to drink, but our influence will be seriously impaired if they can say to us "You voted for the whiskey-shop."

Mr. Goodwill says O.T.A. is excellent "if put into effect." Why not put it into effect ? Well informed circles know it was the "never ending uncertainty" that blocked Mr. Nickle.

As a visitor I was at Presbyterian General Assembly last June when it declared the liquor traffic is "a blot on civilization."

Mr. Woodwill would legalize it, give it the status of Post Office : in this case dealing out brandy and gin, etc ; would put it in competition with grocers, merchants, auto salesmen ; give the majesty of Ontario to glorify it so that people can be officially drunk, as it were, can officially deprive families of food, clothing, amusements, as all social workers testify ; can officially fill drunkards' graves.

Not in 25 years have I cast a partizan vote ; for years publicly and by vote, I supported Sir James Whitney. Mr. Ferguson proposes to undo much of Whitney's work, for local option will avail little now. Whitney, in a letter to me, did not claim the three-fifths clause was needed to enforce the law, but that in a limited area it was needed to make probable its continuance. Whitney, in his day, decreased facilities for sale, all looking toward provincial prohibition. No one who knew Whitney but knows he would have kept his word and enforced O.T.A. with full power of government and the full support for it. He was too good a lawyer to abdicate functions. The British Government and proclaim bootleggers and law-breakers are greater than Governments. Mr. Ferguson's policy of increasing facilities for sale of liquor is the opposite of Whitney's policy, and no twisting can make it otherwise.

I commend the reverend gentleman to November Presbyterian Record, official organ of his Church, page 327. Of the Ontario situation it says : "Everyone who votes for the legalized admission of the drink traffic is a sharer in bringing poverty and want to a drunkard's home, a sharer in ruining every young life that is ruined thereby, a sharer in every crime that is committed as the result of that traffic ; only by doing what one can to keep that traffic out can one be free from its guilt."

The reverend crusader evidently needs some educative force, of which we hear much just now, that he may have power to perceive the liquor traffic is but waiting to ravage the homes of Ontario as it has always and everywhere done when legalized and thus made "respectable."

S. F. DIXON.

Frank Anglin, Prohibition candidate in Addington, whose application to compel Returning Officer Cronk to accept his nomination papers in the election was dismissed at Toronto, announced that he intended to take action to protest the election of W. D. Black, who was declared elected on nomination day. Mr. Anglin quoted Section 59 of the Election Act as providing the basis for his protest. A meeting of the executive behind Mr. Anglin was held on Monday.

Jubilee Services.

Very interesting services were held in St. Mary Magdalene's Church on Sunday, the occasion being the completion of 50 years of use of the Church building for Divine worship. The special preacher for the day was Rev. Dr. H. H. Bedford Jones, a son of the late Archdeacon Bedford Jones, who was Rector of the parish from 1881 to 1890. Two excellent and appropriate sermons were listened to by large congregations. The choir was in good form and the Anthem, "How Amiable are Thy Dwellings," and suitable hymns were well rendered.

The Warden's Supper.

The annual dinner which is given by the Warden of this county at the close of the year's business of the County Council, was given by Warden W. C. J. Loyst at the Paisley House on Thursday evening. The Warden was host to the members of the County Council, the county officials, the town officials and a representative gathering of business men and farmers of the county. Over 200 guests assembled to enjoy the excellent banquet provided by Mr. Fitzpatrick, and listen to the programme which followed the dinner. Music was supplied by Normie's orchestra during the dinner period. The principal speaker of the evening was Dr. Edwards, M.P., for North Frontenac and Addington, who replied to the toast, "Our Empire." The toast to the Town of Napanee was replied to by Messrs. G. A. Aylesworth and M. P. Graham. "The Professions" was replied to by Messrs. J. M. Simpson and Rev. W. J. Swayne, and "The Ladies" by Dr. C. M. Stratton and Jas. Johnston. Messrs. C. Waite, W. J. Shannon, C. S. Vandervoort and John Galt well rendered a couple of fine quartettes, while Mr. Howarth, a comedian from Syracuse, thrilled the guests with his humorous selections, which were heartily encored.

DOES SMOKING HURT?

Intelligence Tests Have Come Out In Favor of the Smokers.

A number of scientists have recently been trying to discover what effect smoking has on mental efficiency. Experiments made some time ago seemed to suggest that, among students, non-smokers did better in examinations than smokers. The latest investigations confirm this.

On the other hand, intelligence tests have come out in favor of the smokers. They may not be quite so good in the examination-room as those who never indulge in the soothing weed, but they seem more alert in other ways.

Scientists are also beginning to doubt whether smoking is at all hurtful physically. Many men, who are "as hard as nails" indulge in smoking. Some of our most noted mountaineers are smokers, and even champion sprinters have allowed themselves a tobacco while in training, though naturally they have been moderate in their use of it.

Greater Vancouver Building Up.

Greater Vancouver is building up rapidly. Building permits for the first three-quarters of the current year show construction running fifty per cent. ahead of the same period last year, with the most marked activity in the city of Vancouver proper. Total permits for the period in question were $22,605,051 as against $14,824,462 for the same months of 1925. Vancouver city shows something more than a doubling up with-in the year, the permits for the present year being $14,039,527 as against $8,572,038 for the three-quarter stretch in 1925.

Western Industries.

The manufacturing industries continue to make progress in western Canada, according to a recent return of the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. Between 1923 and 1924, $17,584,928 was added to the capital invested in Manitoba industries, $377,712 in Saskatchewan, $5,906,674 in Alberta and $34,431,907 in British Columbia. The net value of production in Manitoba in 1924 was $43,215,250; in Saskatchewan, $614,134,784; in Alberta, $26,142,386 and in British Columbia, $86,361,982.

Manitoba's Unused Land.

There are three and a half million acres of unused land in Manitoba, according to the survey started by the Bracken Government, and made up from reports sent in by the various municipalities. The unused acres in question comprise unused lands between organized territory and include all land which does not form an integral part of a regular farm enterprise.

MAN OF 60 HELPED BY SIMPLE MIXTURE

"After taking Adlerika I feel better than for years. At my age (60) it is ideal—so different from other medicines." (signed) W. W. Carter. Adlerika is a simple mixture of buckthorn bark, glycerine, etc., which removes GAS in ten minutes and often brings surprising relief to the stomach. Stops that full, bloated feeling. Brings out old waste-matter you never thought was in your system. Excellent for constipation. Wallace's Drug Store.

THE WONDERS OF RADIO

WHITE MEN IN ARCTIC WELCOME MESSAGES.

Western Stations Send Messages to Chess Men on Lonely Outposts of Canadian Frontiers—Trappers and Fur Traders Also Listen In.

The little community of Aklavik lies hidden in that great stretch of Arctic land which, while it contributes to the total area of Canada, contributes at the present time at least little else, observes the Toronto Mail and Empire. It is situated, so the almanac tells one, on the Mackenzie river delta, N.W.T., and someone has contributed the further information that it is some two thousand miles north of Edmonton. Otherwise little is known of Aklavik by the average person who populates the more convenient and communicable areas of our Dominion. The name post office is given to it more by courtesy than by fact, for the mails reach there only occasionally during the short summer, while in the winter it is cut off completely from the outside world. Yet, like other settlements of the Far North, it includes white men among its population, men who live isolated in this far-away land, sometimes taking with them wives and families.

Listeners-in on an Edmonton radio broadcasting station in the early months of the year might in fact have caught this name Aklavik announced in the middle of the evening program as a special message for the north made its way through the clear air to be caught by a waiting husband in the little settlement. After the name came the simple words, announcing the news from an Edmonton hospital. "A son has been born. We regret to say the mother did not recover." So by means of this new messenger of the air he received the news which with luck might have reached him two months later.

This is a typical instance of what radio is doing for the Canadian pioneers across the frontiers of civilization. To every country of the world it has brought its blessing of greater social contact between the outlying districts and the centres of population, but nowhere is this phase of its virtues more strikingly demonstrated than in this sparsely peopled Dominion where men are still fighting the battles of a new land of promise, forcing their way into virgin forest and plain, and keeping watch over the Arctic. From coast to coast of Canada there are these vast expanses of isolated forest and plain where one live forty, sixty and even a hundred miles from their nearest neighbors, but they are no longer lonely. Each night in their trappers' shack, tiny farmhouse or bushman's shanty the air around is filled with voices. For the large majority who are the happy owners of receiving sets there is daily summary of happenings throughout the Dominion and the world, the daily news-and-reports which keep them in touch with the questions of the day and the realities for tuning in to the play atmosphere of the dance or concert hall, and the thousand and one activities which make up the life of their compatriots.

But it is not alone to the isolated individual or to the tiny settlements that radio has brought its blessing. There are the larger centres such as the City of Dawson, which are almost as completely shut in during the winter months. A single telegraph line guarded by men whose lonely shacks are dotted at distant intervals across the snowy expanse, binds this metropolis to the outside world. Mail is carried over a stormy trail which, with luck, may be traversed in 17 days from the little railway station at Whitehorse, and a letter from Vancouver will take at least twenty-five days to reach its destination. No newspapers, however, are allowed to weigh down the bag of the mail carrier, and news in the ordinary sense of the word before the days of radio broadcasting was confined to a four sheet local paper purchased for twenty-five cents.

Stations in Eastern Canada where isolated conditions are not so great have limited persons' messages to matters of life and death, but from Edmonton they are included in the special programs broadcasted periodically for the benefit of the dweller in the far North, and by filling in the gaps the city dweller may gather for himself something of the romance of life in the Arctic Circle. Following the usual announcement of the broadcasting station, there is sent out through the cold darkness of the winter's night the friendly greeting, "Hello, the North." Then comes the quotations on furs sent in code by the Hudson Bay Company to their distant trading posts, "Oranges 4.84, Apples 5.66½, 1924 was 4.13.25, splash 2.22," and so on, so that throughout the Northwest Territories far dealing is now done on a uniform basis.

Another story told is that of a husband who in the autumn of 1925 was faced with the necessity of bringing his wife in to a hospital to undergo a serious operation which had been pronounced by the only medical adviser available as the last chance of life. The trip was accomplished after many days, and part of the way by water, and the husband returned to his work, there to wait while the winter closed in upon him. The operation was successful and after a series of relays the word was finally sent to him by a high-powered American station.

All outposts of the Northwest Mounted Police are now equipped with receiving sets, through which instructions are sent out when necessary from headquarters. How much these mean to the men of that splendid force is suggested by the following letter received by the broadcasting manager at C.N.R.Y., Vancouver, from Inspector Wilson, who commands the Ellesmere sub-district.

"You will be pleased to know," he writes, "that the programs broadcast from your station were received at North Baffinland, N.W.T., during the dark and lonely months when the sun disappears from November until February. It is then we fully appreciate them."

MEN'S AND BOYS' CLOTHING, - NAPANEE, ONTARIO

The Strength of the Pines

By Edison Marshall

Author of "The Voice of the Pack"

Illustrations by Irwin Myers

Copyright by Lit. Digest & Co.

When the distance had almost obscured him, she saw him stop. He waited a long time, then turned back. The man went in and out of the clouds. Then, trusting to the distance to conceal her, Linda rode slowly out into the clearing.

Simon re-entered the timber, his inspection seemingly done, and Linda still rode in the general direction he had gone. A curious sense of impending events came over her as she headed on toward the distant wall of forest beyond.

Then, the clouds slowly dimming under the moon, the light grew with almost imperceptible encroachments. At first it was only bright enough to shew her own dim shadow on the grass. The utter gloom that was over the fields lessened and drew away like receding curtains; her vision reached ever farther, the shadows grew more clearly outlined and distinct. Then the moon rolled forth into a wholly open patch of sky—a white sphere with a sprinkling of vivid stars around it—and the silver radiance poured down.

It was like the breaking of dawn. The fields stretched to incredible distances about her. The forest beyond emerged in distinct outline; she could see every irregularity in the plain. And in one instant's glance she knew that she had found Bruce.

His situation went home to her in one sweep of the eyes. Bruce was not alone. Even now a great, towering figure was creeping toward him from the forest. Linda cried out, and with the long strap of her rein lashed her horse into the fastest pace it knew.

Bruce did not hear her come. He lay in the soft grass, waiting for death. A great calm had come upon him; a strange, quiet strength that the pines themselves might have lent to him; and he made no cry. In this dreadful last moment of despair the worst of his terror had gone and left his thoughts singularly clear. And but one desire was left to him: that the Killer might be merciful and end his existence with one blow.

It was not a great deal to ask for; but he knew perfectly that only by the favor of the fiercest gods could it come to pass. They are usually not so kind to the old; and it is not the wild animal's way to take pains to kill at the first blow. Yet his eyes held straight. The Killer crept slowly toward him; more and more of his great body emerged from the tall heads of the grass. And now all that Bruce knew was a great wonder—a strange expectancy and awe of what the opening gates of darkness would reveal.

The Killer moved with dreadful slowness and deliberation. He was no longer afraid. It was just as it had been before—a warm figure lying still and helpless for his own terrible pleasure. A few feet more—and he would be near enough to see plainly; then—after the grizzly habit—to fling into the charge. He paused, his muscles setting. And then the monstrous sentry rang with the undulations of his snarl.

Almost unconscious, Bruce did not understand what had caused his utterance. But scarcely, the bear had lifted his head and was staring straight over him. For the first time Bruce heard the wild beat of hoofs on the turf behind him.

He didn't have time to turn and look. There was no opportunity even for a flood of reasoned hope. Events followed upon one another with startling rapidity. The sharp, unmistakable crack of a pistol leaped through the dusk, and a bullet sang over his body. And then a wild-riding figure swept up to him.

It was Linda. During as she came. How she had been able to control her horse and ride fast, into that scene of peril no words may reveal. Perhaps, emptied wholly from the heels, his startling eyes did not discern or interpret the easy figure scarcely a score of yards distant from Bruce; and it is true the grizzly's pungent smell—a thing to terrify much some might be interpreted more clearly than any kind of dim form in the moonlight—was blown in the opposite direction. Perhaps the lashing strain revealed the terrible punishment that the animal undergone earlier that evening at the hands of Simon and no room was left for any lesser terror. But most likely of all, just as in the case of brave soldiers riding their horses into fire, the girl's own strength and courage went into him.

The bear reared up, snarling with wrath, but for a moment it dared not charge. The sudden appearance of the girl and the horse held him momentarily at bay. The girl swung to the ground in one long, fired again, thrust her arm through the loop of the bridle rein, then knelt at Bruce's side. And when blade that she carried in her left hand slashed at his bonds.

The horse, plunging, seemed to jerk the body back and forth, and endless seconds seemed to go by before the last of the thongs was severed. In reality the whole scene was unbelievably swift. The man helped her all he could. "Up into the saddle," she commanded. The grizzly growled again, close—so close that it seemed them, and twice more she fired. Two of the bullets went home in his great body, but their weight and shocking power were too slight to affect him. He went down once more on all feets, preparing to charge.

Bruce, in spite of the fact that his limbs had been nearly paralyzed by the tight bonds, managed to grasp the saddlehorn. In the strength of newborn hope he pulled himself half up on it, and he felt Linda's strong arms behind him pushing up. The horse plunged in deadly fear; and the Killer leaped toward them. Once more the pistol cracked. Then the horse broke and ran in a frenzy of terror.

Bruce was full in the saddle by then, and even at the first leap his arm swept out to the girl on the ground beside him. He swung her toward him, and at the same time her hands caught at the arching back of the saddle. For the first fifty feet she was half dragged, but slowly—with Bruce's help—she pulled herself up to a position of security.

The Killer's charge had come a few seconds too late. For a moment he raced behind them in insane fury, but only his savage growl leaped through the darkness fast enough to catch up with them. And the distance slowly widened.

The Killer had been cheated again; and by the same token Simon's oath had been proved untrue. For once the remorseless strength of which he boasted had been worsted by a greater strength; and love, not hate, was the power that gave it. For once a girl's courage—a courage greater than that with which he obeyed the dictates of his cruel will—had cost him his victory. The way was clear, and his outlaw band had begun so long ago had not yet been won.

Indeed, if Simon could have seen what the moon saw as it peered over from behind the clouds, he would have known that one of the debts of blood incurred so many years ago had even now been paid. Far away on a distant hillside there was one who gave no heed to the fast back-ward of the speeding horse. It was Dave Turner, and his trail of lust and wickedness was ended at last. He lay with lifted face, and there were curious dark stains on the pine needles.

And the pines, those tall, dark sentinels of the wilderness, seemed to look down upon him in passionless contemplation, as if they wondered at the stumbling ways of men. Their branches rubbed together and made words as the wind swept through them, but no man may say what those words were.

COMING OF THE STRENGTH

CHAPTER XXIV

Fall was at hand at Trail's End. The spirit of autumn had come with golden wings.

A buck deer—a noble creature with six points on his spreading horns—got the first inkling of it when he stopped at a spring to drink. The air had been chill in his nostrils, but thanks to a heavy growth of hair that—with mysterious foresight—had begun to come upon his body it gave him no discomfort. But it was a puzzling and significant thing that the water he bent to drink had been transformed to something hard and cold that burning cold to the tip of his nose.

It was the first real freeze. True, for the past few nights there had been a measure of chilling, cobweb frost on the ground in wet places, but even the tender-skinned buds always meet with full of signs of this kind—had disregarded it. But there was no disregarding this half-inch of lime ice that had covered the spring. The buck deer struck it angrily with his front hoofs, broke through and drank; then went snorting up the hill.

His anger was in itself a significant thing. In the long, easy-going summer days, Blackjack had almost forgotten what anger was like. He had been content to roam over the ridges, cropping the leaves and grass, avoiding danger and growing fat. But all at once this kind of existence had palled on him. He felt that he wanted only one thing—not food or drink, or safety—but a good, slashing, hacking, heart-carving battle with another buck of his own species. An unbounded cross-grained came upon him and his soft eyes burned with a blue fire. He remembered the does, too—with a sudden leap of his blood—and wondered where they were keeping themselves. Making only a beast he did not know that this new belligerent spirit was just as much a sign of fall as the soft blush that was coming on the leaves. The simple fact was that fall means the beginning of the rut—the wild mating days when the bucks battle among themselves and choose their harems of does.

He had rather liked his appearance as he saw himself in the water of the spring. The last of the velvet had been rubbed from his horns, and the twelve tines (six on each horn) were as hard and almost as sharp as so many bayonet points.

As the morning dimmed, the change in the temperature became ever more manifest. The leaves of the shrubbery began to change in color. The wind out of the north had a keener, more biting quality, and the birds were having some sort of exciting debate in the tree tops.

The birds are always a scurried, nervous, rather rattle-brained outfit, and seem wholly incapable of making a decision about anything without hours of argument and discussion. Their days are simply filled with one excitement after another, and they tell more scandal in an hour than the old ladies in a resort manage in the entire summer. But since transformation in the color of the leaves, not to mention the chill of the frost through their scanty feathers, had created a sensation from one end of birdland to another. And there was only one thing about it. That was to wait until the darkness closed down again, then start away toward the path of the sun in search of their winter resort in the Land of Mild.

The Little People in the forest of ferns beneath were not such gay birds, and they did not have such high-flown ideas as these feathered folk in the branches. They didn't talk much; but laziness and talk from dawn to dark. They didn't wear gay clothes that weren't a particle of good to them in cold weather. You can imagine them as being good, substantial, middle-class people, very much absorbed, tending strictly to business and working hard, and among other things they saw no need of flitting down to southern resorts for the cold season. They simply helped the nearby ground squirrels and gophers and chipmunks and rabbits—had not been fitted by nature for wide travel and had made all arrangements for a pleasant winter at home. You could almost see a smile on the fat face of a plump old gopher when he came out and found the frost upon the ground; for he knew that for months past he had been putting away stores for just this season. In the snows that would follow he would simply retire into the farthest recesses of his burrow and let the winds whistle vainly above him.

The larger creatures, however, were less complacent. The wolves—animals have any powers of foresight whatever—knew that only hard days, not luscious nuts and roots, were in store for them. There would be many days of hunger once the snow came over the land. The black bear saw the signs and began a desperate effort to lay up as many extra pounds of fat as possible before the snows broke. He would have need of the extra flesh. The time was coming when all sources of food would be cut off by the snows, and he would have to seek the security of hibernation. He had already chosen an underground abode for himself and there he could doze away in the cold-trance through the winter months, subsisting on the supplies of fat that he had stored next to his furry hide.

The greatest of all the bears, the Killer, knew of none such. He awaited him also. But he looked forward to it with wretched spirit. He was master of the forest, and perhaps he did not like to yield even to the spirit of winter. His savagery grew upon him every day, and his dislike for men had turned to a veritable hatred. But he had found them out. When he crossed their trails again, he would not wait to stalk. They were apt to slip away from him in this case—and sting him unmercifully with bullets. The thing to do was charge quickly and strike with all his power.

The three minor wounds he had received—two in the head bullets—and one from Bruce's rifle—had not lessened his strength at all. They did, however, serve to keep his blood heat at the explosive stage most of the day and night.

The flowers and the grasses were dying; the moths that paid calls on the flowers had laid their eggs and had perished, and winter lurked—ready to pounce forth—just beyond the distant mountains. There is nothing more thoroughly unreliable as the mountain autumn. It may linger in entrancing golds and browns month after month, until it is almost time for spring to come again; and again it may make one short bow and usher in the winter.

To Bruce and Linda, in the old Foley home in Trail's End, these fall days offered the best hope of success in their war against the Turners.

The adventure in the pasture with the Killer had handicapped them to an unlooked-for degree. Bruce's muscles had been severely strained by the bonds; several days had elapsed before he regained their full use. Linda was a mountain girl, hardy as a deer, yet her nerves had suffered a greater shock by the experience than either of them had guessed. The wild ride, the fear and the stress, and most of all the base blow that Simon had dealt her had been too much even for her strong constitution; and she had been obliged to go to bed for a few days of rest. Old Elmira worked about the house the same as ever, but strange, new lights were in her eyes. For reasons that went down to the roots of things, neither Bruce nor Linda questioned her as to her source with Dave Turner in the coverts; and what thoughts dwelt in her aged mind neither of them could guess.

The truth was that in these short weeks of trial and danger whatever dreadful events had come to pass in that meeting were worth neither thought nor words. Both Bruce and Linda were down to essentials. It is a decent that most human beings—some time in their lives—find they are able to make; and there was no room for sentimentality or hysteria in this grim household. The ideas, the softnesses, the laws of the valleys were far away from them; they were face to face with realities. Their code had become the basic code of life: to kill for self-protection without mercy or remorse.

They did not know when the Turners would attack. It was the dark of the moon, and the men would be able to approach the house without presenting themselves as targets for Bruce's rifle. The danger was not a thing on which to conjecture and forget; it was an ever-present reality. Never they stepped out of the door, never they crossed a lighted window, never a pane rattled in the wind but that the wings of Death might have been hovering over them. The days were passing, the date when the chance for victory would utterly pass was at hand, and they were haunted by the ghastly fact that their whole defense lay in a single thirty-thirty rifle and five cartridges. Bruce's own gun had been taken from him in his mom's house; Linda had emptied her pistol at the Killer.

"We've got to get more shells," Bruce told Linda. "The Turners won't be such fools as to wait until the moon is again, to attack. I can't understand why they haven't already come. Of course, they don't know the condition of our ammunition supply, but it doesn't seem to me that that alone would have held them off. They are sure to come soon, and you know what we could do with five cartridges, don't you?"

"I know." She looked up into his earnest face. "We could die—that's all."

"Yes—like rabbits. Without hurting them at all. I wouldn't mind dying so much, if I did plenty of damage first. It's death for me, anyway, I suppose—and so one. But I can't see it otherwise. There are simply too many against us. But I do want to make some payment first."

Her hand fumbled and groped for his. Her eyes pleaded to him—more than any words. "And you mean you've given up hope?" she cried.

He smiled down at her—a grave, strange little smile that moved her in secret ways. "Not given up hope, Linda," he said gently. They were standing at the door and the sunlight—coming low from the south—was on his face. "I've never had any hope to give up—just realization of what lay ahead of us. I'm looking it all in the face now, just as I did at first."

"And what you see—makes you afraid?"

Yet she need not have asked that question. His face gave an unmistakable answer; that this man had conquered fear in the terrible night with the Killer. "Not afraid, Linda," he explained, "only seeing things as they really are. There are too many against us. If we had that great estate behind us, with all its wealth, we might have a chance; if we had an arsenal of rifles with thousands of cartridges, we might make a stand against them. But we are three—two women and one man—and one rifle between us all. Five little shells to be expended in five seconds. They are seven or eight, each man armed, each man a rifle shot. They are certain to attack within a day or two—before we have the moon again. In less than two weeks we can no longer contest their title to the estate. A little month or two more and we will be snowed in—with no chance to get out at all."

"And You Mean You've Given Up Hope?" She Asked.

"Perhaps before that," she told him.

"Yes. Perhaps before that."

They found a continuation of this prophecy in the signs of fall without—the coloring leaves, the dying flowers, the new, cold breath of the wind. Only the pines remained unchanged; they were the same grave sentinels they always were.

Two Here Cases of Feminine Illness Relieved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Barrington, N. S.—"I had terrible feelings, headaches, back and side aches and pains all the time. I would have to go to bed every month and nothing would do me good. My husband and my father did my work for me as I have two children and we have quite a big place. I read in the paper about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and then got a little book about it through the mail, and my husband sent to Eaton's and got me a bottle, and then we got more from the store. I am feeling fine now and do all my work and am able to go out around more. I tell my friends it is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that makes me feel so well."—Mrs. VICTOR RICHARDSON, Barrington, Nova Scotia.

A FORMER PASTOR OF MORVEN TELLS OF CONDITIONS IN SASK.

Lumsden, Sask.,
Nov. 19th.

To the Editor :

A year ago the writer of this note moved from Ontario to Saskatchewan. So many of my friends in the East have written me for an evaluation of the conditions under Government Sale that I am hoping for sufficient space in your paper for a short note bearing on the issue before the Ontario electorate.

Judging from the manifesto of Mr. Ferguson as reported in the Saskatchewan Press here, it would appear that the whole object of the proposed legislation is the abolition of the bootlegger, rather than the abolition of alcoholic liquors. Repealing a law in order to enforce it is rather a UNIQUE method of law enforcement to say the least. Judging from conditions in this province, Mr. Ferguson is doomed to disappointment and the bootlegger to an era of uninterrupted prosperity.

May I submit some facts which have come under my personal observation in a province where it is as easy to buy liquor as to purchase peanuts, no permit being required : In September in one issue of the daily press there were over 20 cases of ILLICIT TRAFFIC alleged. This past week two small towns near here have been able to boast of Court cases arising out of illegal sale. On Armistice Day (in the morning) there were 11 persons in a city police court, charged with selling liquor—that is about ONE BOOTLEGGER for every 2260 per population. Within a fortnight in a town of 500 population, there were fifteen men intoxicated at a dance (in various stages of intoxication) and several of these were too young to buy liquor themselves. It is up to the advocates of Government Sale to explain away the idea that there is an illicit source of supply.

Two classes of customers patronize the Illicit Dealers and always will do : Those who will not go and PUBLICLY purchase liquor, and secondly, those whom even the Advocates of liquor would consider too young to have it handed to them thru government dispensary—these classes we have always with us. I do not see that a PERMIT system can do anything but increase this number of customers when the class exists so commonly in a country where sale is pretty much wide open. Mr. Ferguson will find that in spite of the popularity of "Permits" in many communities men will scarcely dare to avail themselves of the privilege.

My conclusions are : That Illicit Sale is still prevalent where liquor is more readily secured than it will be in Ontario. Also that it has the same drastic effect even if purchased through the more dignified channel of a Government Store.

SAYS FATHER MINEHAN TO PREMIER FERGUSON

AN INDIGNANT RESPONSE

Rev. Father L. Minehan, Pastor of the Church of St. Vincent de Paul, Toronto, writes the following to Hon. E. Howard Ferguson:

"I think I know my young people as well as you. And I fling back indignantly into your teeth the insinuation that the hip flask is common amongst them. I do not know in what society you move ; were I to judge it by your utterances, I am devoutly thankful for my lack of acquaintance. And I cannot understand how the increase of facilities for indulgence is going to cure or diminish the evils of which you complain."

The Butler's Mistake.

An amusing story is being told by Lieut.-Col. Cyril Foley regarding his uncle, Lord Northbrook, a former Viceroy of India.

On his return Lord Northbrook invited some gentlemen of color to dinner. As there was no sign of them long after the hour appointed, he asked his butler if anyone had called. "No, my lord," said the butler; "only some negro minstrels, but I sent them about their business." He had mistaken the dignified notabilities for burnt-cork-blacked street singers!

PRESBYTERIAN RECORD FOR PROHIBITION.

"The November issue of the Presbyterian Record, official organ of the Presbyterian Church, speaking o rthe Ontario situation, says, on page 327 : "Everyone who votes for the legalized admission of the drink traffic is a sharer in bringing poverty and want to a drunkard's home, a sharer in ruining every young life tht is ruined thereby, a sharer in every crime that is committed, as the result of that traffic ; only by doing what one can to keep that traffic out, can one be free from its guilt."

CHURCH LEADERS ON PROHIBITION

of Toronto

1. Strong drink as a beverage is the deadliest foe of liberty. The throne of liberty is the brain. And the moment strong drink enters the lips an attack is made on that throne. It may not at first be very perceptible, but the enemy has made a lodgment and he will work insidiously and unceasingly to gain the mastery.

2. You cannot have the use of strong drink, however curbed, without a terrible amount of abuse. Government Control has meant ultimately in every instance control of the Government by the Liquor Traffic. Let the serpent's head be admitted and his body will quickly follow. His coils will soon firmly entwine law administration and his bite will spread death.

3. Now strong drink as a beverage has nothing to its credit, and to its discredit has the most damning scourge of humanity. It is a disgrace to human justice that it has not long ago been prohibited.

ANGLICAN CLERGYMAN SPEAKS

"Control Not Working"

Rev. A. H. Sovereign, Anglican minister at head of the Ministerial Association of Greater Vancouver :

"The Government Control System simply is not working ; it is not controlling. Bootlegging is very prevalent. The debauchery in the hotels to which women and liquor are taken is terrible. Men who only want a whisky-and-soda are compelled by the system to buy a whole quart and take it home. Bootlegging is worse than it was under prohibition. The Government has located a liquor store for the Chinese in the Chinese section, and located another for sale to loggers, miners, and fishermen.

"Every time the loggers' boat is about to pull out drunken men lie around on all sides. On one occasion out of more than 100 loggers going north on the steamer only two were sober.

"Three weeks ago I brought back from the north a lot of girls who had been attending a girls' camp. There were so many drunken men around tht whart that I had to stay on the job to save the girls from molestation."

REV. GEO. C. PIDGEON, D. D.
Ex-Moderator of The United Church of Canada

This Province is fighting a battle both for itself and for the whole Dominion. If we win, the tide will be turned in favor of prohibition, and province after province will be encouraged to take up the struggle. If we fail, the results of over fifty years of toil and conflict will be imperilled. At present the retail trade in intoxicants is under the ban of the law, and to engage in it is a crime ; it is now proposed to give it legal standing and to authorize the government itself to engage in it. This means bringing intoxicants within easy reach of every adult in the land. The result will be an enormous increase in drinking and drunkenness, the introduction of the liquor traffic into politics, increased facilities for the law-breaker and a corresponding growth in the illicit sale. The extension of private interest in the sale of liquor seems inevitable under this system, and this means that vested interests in the traffic will become a factor to be reckoned with in every community in the land. Every man and woman who desires to see youth and maturity surrounded with elevating influences, who believes that the state should make well-doing as easy as possible and evil doing as difficult as possible, and who shrinks from the responsibility of having a share in so destructive a traffic, should be at the post of duty until election day, and if faithful in our use of our gifts and opportunities, we cannot but succeed.

PRESIDENT OF ST. ANDREW'S COLLEGE, SASKATOON

Dear Dr. Neil :—

I see that Premier Ferguson is bringing on an election in Ontario with a platform of Government Control of the Sale of Liquor, under the Local Option scheme. This is substantially what we have in Saskatchewan. This was promised to this Province as a cure-all for the evils of bootlegging and other illicit sale which undoubtedly existed to some extent under our former Prohibitory laws. Ontario is facing the same choice in this election as Saskatchewan faced in its plebiscite four or five years ago. My work takes me to every quarter of the Province. My considered judgment is that the establishment of Government Control was a distinctly backward step. It has not eliminated bootlegging, has increased drunkenness. It has greatly increased the police-court cases. It has notoriously added to the tragedies in automobile fatalities. On this latter basis alone I should strenuously resist the step Ontario is considering. I shudder to think of Toronto and Hamilton and the Ontario roads with their tremendous auto traffic if liquor is easily accessible in Government shops.

Signed,

EDMUND H. OLIVER,
President.

PRESBYTERIAN LEADER IN EDMONTON, ALBERTA

"Magistrate Murphy's reported statement is misleading. It does not cover all the facts. Conditions are worse than during prohibition. As for beer parlors, they are in many ways more demoralizing than the bar. D. G. McQueen.

PRINCIPAL OF WESTERN COLLEGE SPEAKS

"Rev. John Miller of United Church College, Edmonton :— Special investigation of nineteen Edmonton saloons extending over three nights, January, nineteen twenty-five, showed average of 723 men and 89 women present each night. Similar investigation of eighteen saloons, conducted by reliable committee, on Friday and Saturday last showed average 1,341 men and 101 women with average of forty-five staggering drunks. Barrister Marks informs me twenty-three extra officials were employed in nineteen twenty-five, travelling two hundred thousand miles in auto in connection with the liquor enforcement. This force was presumably in the attempt to curb bootlegging.

GENERAL SECRETARY RELIGIOUS EDUCATION COUNCIL

Regina, Nov. 6, 1926

As General Secretary of the Religious Education Council, travelling constantly, perhaps no one comes into closer contact with conditions that myself, and I want to say that from my own personal observation and knowledge of facts, nothing could be farther from the truth than to say that the Government Control system is a success. Due to the fact that it is made more accessible there is more liquor being consumed and more drunkenness to be observed on the streets than for many many years, and we who have the interest particularly of the young life at heart, are very much concerned over the growing numbers of young people who are becoming addicted to the drink habit. At all our Conventions the matter is discussed and the testimony is uniformly the same, that everywhere the drink evil is on the increase.

CHARLES MORGAN,
General Secretary Religious Education Council.

MODERATOR OF UNITED CHURCH OF CANADA

As to the presence of some idealistic people on the side of Government Control, Dr. Endicott pointed out that not fifteen years ago an array of eminent men could be found to justify the open bar and the liquor shop in this province, and they are still to be found in defence of whatever system of distributing liquor still remains.

The argument from contempt of law is to be answered by more vigorous enforcement of the good law that we now have.

The Ontario Temperance Act at its worst is, in my judgment, vastly better in relation to poverty, home life, health and character than Government Sale at its best.

Some eminent men, including divines, are now giving their blessing to this proposed measure, but when, he would ask, "was the traffic not able to secure such justifications?" We believe on the other hand that in all its history in every land, Ontario included, the traffic in drink is followed by degradation.

Their union was blessed by six children, five of which are living, seven grand-children and one great grand-child. A family reunion was held to celebrate the diamond wedding anniversary.

COMPLETING PEACE BRIDGE.

When Bonds Are Retired Structure Becomes Public Property.

The two shores of the Niagara river between Buffalo and Fort Erie were linked with steel on Oct. 15th, when the ends of the Peace Bridge met. There was no ceremony, no event being witnessed only by workmen who saw a final step in a job, and newspapermen who saw it as the culmination of a project advocated for a generation.

The total cost of the bridge will be about $4,000,000, including about $800 a day in interest during the construction period.

The charter of the company provides that when the bonds have been retired, the holders thereof drawing seven and eight per cent. meanwhile, the bridge shall become private property. It has been estimated that 6,000 cars an hour can be handled over the bridge, as it is intended to provide nine distinct runways for each side for customs and immigration purposes. The directors of the company thus hope to avert the congestion which prevails at the Niagara Falls bridges, where the terminal facilities are virtually non-extant.

It is expected that the bridge will be formally opened on May 24 next, although it may be in use a short time earlier. W. A. Gerry Moore, vice-president, and F. B. Baird, president of the bridge company, recently were in Ottawa with a view to inviting the Prince of Wales to attend at the dedication. It is planned also to have President Coolidge at the ceremony.

The bridge and approaches are about 400 feet long. There are five steel arch spans and one truss span. The structure at the Buffalo end is 105 feet above the level of the Black Rock Canal, permitting the largest lake vessels to pass under it. The descent to the Canadian shore is two and a half per cent. All five arches are segments of the same circle, so that the effect, while not symmetrical, is not displeasing.

Postmaster-General Will Turn It Over to Private Contractors.

Mails by air seem to have met with distance in the United States, says the Toronto Star and Mail. When Postmaster-General New announced additional air routes a year ago, criticism of the service was the epoch in the history of the American Post Office. But recently he stated that the two transcontinental air services, the transcontinental and the over-night New York-Chicago would be turned over to private contractors. The latter is understood to be the only air mail service which pays for the cost of operation. It is not likely that a contractor could make sufficient revenue from mails to cover not only the costs of operation but also overhead charges which are not generally taken into account in a government service. In fact the Post-master-General admits that no company can successfully carry mails direct unless permitted to carry passengers and express matter.

Last year no less than four Boards of Inquiry presented reports on the best basis for future aeronautical development. But the cost of operation are high. The operating statement of the United States Air Mail for 1925 shows that a total of $2,743,750 was expended on 2,501,555 miles flown. The success of a subsidized passenger service seems doubtful. On the route between New York and Chicago both mail planes and army planes have come to grief in the stubborn fogs lurking over the Allegheny. Transportation of express matter is more promising, but the field has not been thoroughly investigated. The possibilities of the air mail service in the United States have been over-estimated, and in many respects it has failed to realize the hopes of its promoters.

GOAT RAISING IN B. C.

Herds Are Steadily Increasing In Numbers.

Goat raising in British Columbia may now be considered as permanently established, writes A. A. MacMillan, of the Sheep and Goat Division, Ottawa. Herds are steadily increasing in numbers, methods of management and feeding are improving, housing accommodation is much better and market demand for goat stock and goat's milk is growing in volume from year to year.

Any one who has taken the time and trouble to study the extent of the goat industry in the province cannot help but be impressed with the quality of the stock and the revenue which goat breeders are making from their herds.

There are always several main reasons why any industry flourishes. In the case of goats the province is admirably suited to their habits. The climate is not severe and there is abundance of shrubs and underbrush which provides ample browsing at all seasons of the year. Combined with these natural attributes of the province a supply of good alfalfa or clover hay is readily obtainable. Oats, bran and oilcake which comprise the basic grain and meal ration for milking does or growing stock are also available at market prices. To the casual observer goat raising just seems to fit into British Columbia conditions.

Another reason for the popularity of goats on the coast, in fact anywhere, is their docility and the fact that they can be easily handled by children. Wherever there are children they are loyal supporters of the milking does. The boys and girls take them out to browse and pasture. They know their likes and dislikes. They do the milking and feeding. Milking does and kids seem to respond equally as well to the attentions which they receive from their youthful owners, and are inevitably boon companions. The goat develops in the children a love for animals quickly and more permanently than any other animal.

Adaptability to conditions and likable qualities, while very excellent in themselves, would not likely stand the test of time unless supported with revenue-producing qualities. There are good and poor milking strains of goats, but by a rigid process of selection British Columbia goat breeders are selecting does that milk well.
